Production Ex Machina & Théâtre Sans Frontières
We often confuse voice, speech and language, but those are indeed three very distinct and totally different things. \textit{Lipsynch} is about the specific signification of all three and their interaction in modern human expression.

Up until now, our work at Ex Machina had focused mainly on telling stories using image, movement, space and music. Voice was rather an afterthought. This time around, we have decided to make it our focal point, and see where the exploration of oral communication in all its forms would take us. This endeavor has lead us to unsuspected places, a dizzying trek forcing us, as individuals involved in this artistic project, to delve deeper than ever before into our own selves. The voice is an internal machinery that finds its ultimate expression outside of the body, but in order to examine it and try to understand it properly one needs to pull away from visual stimuli for a while and go where the voice is « seated ». As in our other shows, the form and structure of \textit{Lipsynch} is baroque and unconstrained but this time, the characters seem to have emerged from a place that is more profound.

I often compare our evolving artistic process to the image of a tree. The audience only sees the trunk, bark, branches and leaves. But the artist should be preoccupied by the growth happening underground, in that unseen network of roots digging erratically yet so expertly that it can hold, sustain and nurture the whole tree.

Robert Lepage
Lipsynch — to an epic journey

From its most primitive expression – a baby’s cry – to its most sophisticated – opera singing – the human voice is a select locus of identity and emotion. Lipsynch explores its many manifestations, declensions and implications though different procedures that convey and reproduce it.

Telephone, radio, sound tracks and silent films, playback and post-synchronization: singing voices, synthesized voices, voices of the conscience, voices of blood relatives, voices from beyond, hallucinated voices. Nine stories unfold in nine hours, focussing on nine protagonists whose lives answer, relay and echo each other.

As in The Dragons’ Trilogy and The Seven Streams of the River Ota, the singularity of individual destinies is superimposed on the magnitude of collective history, forming a gigantic modern fresco in the image of our modern world, fragmented and plural, burlesque and tragic, and layered with multiple languages, sounds and meanings.

Lipsynch — Robert Lepage

Versatile in every form of theatre craft, Robert Lepage is equally talented as a director, scenic artist, playwright, actor and film director. His creative and original approach to theatre has won him international acclaim and shaken the dogma of classical stage direction to its foundations, especially through his use of new technologies. Contemporary history is his source of inspiration, and his modern and unusual work transcends all boundaries.

Robert Lepage was born in Quebec in 1957. He took an early interest in geography, and when he later discovered all art forms, theatre caught his particular attention. He entered the Conservatoire d’art dramatique de Québec in 1975 at the age of 17. After a study period in Paris in 1978 he returned to Quebec and became involved in many creative projects, gaining experience as actor, author and director. Two years later he joined the Théâtre Repère.

In 1984, his play Circulations toured Canada and received Best Canadian Production award at the Quinzaine Internationale de Théâtre de Québec. The next year The Dragon's Trilogy gained him an international reputation, quickly followed by Vinci (1986), Polygraph (1987) and Tectonic Plates (1988). In 1988 he formed his own professional management company, Robert Lepage Inc. (RLI).

From 1989 to 1993 he was Artistic Director of the Théâtre français at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa. Meanwhile pursuing his own creative projects, he directed Needles and Opium (1991), Coriolanus, Macbeth, and The Tempest (1992). With A Midsummer Night's Dream in 1992 he became the first North American to direct a Shakespeare play at the Royal National Theatre in London.

A turning point in his career came with the founding of his multidisciplinary production company, Ex Machina, in 1994. Under his artistic direction, this new team produced a steady output of plays, beginning with The Seven Streams of the River Ota (1994), A Midsummer Night's Dream (1995) and a solo production, Elsinore (1995). In 1994, he made his début in the world of cinema. He wrote and directed his first feature film, Le Confessional, which appeared the following year at the Cannes Festival Directors' Fortnight. He went on to direct Polygraph in 1996, Nô in 1997, Possible Worlds in 2000 (his first feature film written in English), and finally, in 2003, a film adaptation of his play The Far Side of the Moon.

Robert Lepage is often asked to turn his creative hand to new fields. In 1993, he directed Peter Gabriel's Secret World Tour. In 2000, he was involved in producing Métissages, an exhibition at the Musée de la civilisation in Quebec City. In 2002, he joined forces with Peter Gabriel again to direct Growing Up Tour. He later designed and directed Cirque du Soleil shows: KÀ in 2005, a permanent show in Las Vegas, and TOTEM in 2010, a show under Grand Chapiteau that will tour worldwide. For Quebec City's 400th anniversary in 2008, Robert Lepage and Ex Machina created the largest architectural projection ever achieved: The Image Mill™. In 2009, Aurora Borealis, a permanent lighting installation inspired by the colors of the northern lights was created on the same location.

Robert Lepage made a grand entrance in the opera world when he staged the successful double bill: Bluebeard's Castle and Erwartung (1993). His presence on the operatic stage continued with La Damnation de Faust presented for the first time in the Saito Kinen Festival Matsumoto, Japan (1999), then at the Opera National de Paris and the Metropolitan Opera in New York. Among his achievements in opera: Das Rheingold, Wagner’s Ring prelude, premiered September 2010 at The Metropolitan Opera with the cycle being presented during the 2010-11 and 2011-12 seasons.

Robert Lepage's work has been recognized by many awards. Among the most important was the medal of the Officers of the Ordre national du Quebec in 1999. In September 2000, he was given the SORIQ Award (La Société des relations internationales de Québec) for the impact of his work outside Quebec. In October, 2001, he was recognized with the World Leaders Association of Harbourfront Centre, once again in honour of the international scope of his career. In 2002, France received him into the Légion d'honneur, the Quebec Chamber of Commerce named him “Grand Québécois”, and he won the Herbert Whittaker Drama Bench Award for his outstanding contribution to Canadian theatre. The following year he won the Denise Pelletier Prize, the highest distinction awarded by the Quebec government in the performing arts field, as well as the National Theatre School's Gascon Thomas Award. In 2004 he was awarded the Hans Christian Andersen Prize for his outstanding artistic contribution to honouring Hans Christian Andersen worldwide. In 2005 he received the Institut France-Canada's Samuel de Champlain Prize for his contribution to French culture and the Stanislavski Award for his contribution to international theatre and the dissemination of his productions The Dragons’ Trilogy, The Seven Streams of the River Ota and The Busker’s Opera. In 2007, the Festival de l’Union des Théâtres de l’Europe honoured him with the distinguished Prix Europe, previously awarded to Ariane Mnouchkine and Bob Wilson among others. The production of The Far Side of the Moon was recognized by The Golden Mask Festival of Russian Performing Arts 2007 in the category of Best Foreign Production. In 2009, he received the Governor General's Performing Arts Award for his outstanding contribution to the cultural life of the country.
